Five Million Shrinks While Parrot Talks

NEW YORK. (AP)—A $5,000,000 gold shipment arrived from Peru this week on the Grace liner Santa Clara, but before it was landed it shrank to $4,999,700 because a parrot was on board and had to be fumigated.

Gerald Free owns the bird, and the federal government keeps a sharp eye on parrots, what with the recent psittacosis epidemic. Capt. E. J. Parker of the Santa Clara was anxious to land the gold, sent by the Peruvian government to meet commercial obligations.

"Either kill the bird or fumigate it," ordered a customs inspector.

The government fumigated and Captain Parker fumed because the time consumed took $300 interest from the $5,000,000.

Free and the parrot then strolled down the gangplank, the latter lustily singing "Rolling Down the Rio" and encoring with a nice rendition of the "Anvil Chorus."

Jealousy Hinders Oil Conservation

Independents and Big Companies Present Problem in Texas

AUSTIN, Texas. (AP)—The generations old fear of the independent for the "big fellow" in his particular industry has cropped out again with renewed vigor.

In this particular instance the fear of the small man for the large corporation and his instinctive fear of trusts and monopolies in threatening Governor R. S. Sterling's plan to conserve the state's natural resources, and to be specific, oil and gas conservation.

The Texas legislature was convened in special session July 14 to enact conservation laws, the governor and others being of the opinion adequate conservation laws automatically would bring about better conditions in the chaotic oil industry.

But the jealousy between the major companies and the independent oil operators rose to the surface with the first arrival of legislators for the session. And it has continued unabated since the session started with representatives of major companies and independents sparring heatedly in investigations before both the house and senate.

Many believe that unless the two groups settled their differences and agreed on a program that hopes for constructive legislation to aid the oil industry would be shattered. Many others believe the two groups are so diametrically opposed it will be impossible for them to get together on anything but minor details.

It also has been pointed out frequently that the independents are divided among themselves and cannot present a united front on any proposition.

Capone Withdraws Guilty Plea Friday

Case Set for Trial on September 18 by Judge Wilkerson

CHICAGO, Ill. (AP)—Al Capone was granted leave to withdraw his guilty plea to indictments for the violation of income tax laws in an unexpected morning court session Friday.

Federal Judge Wilkerson set the case for trial on September 18 and announced he would reserve his decision until that date on the gangster's motion to withdraw his guilty plea in an indictment for conspiring against the prohibition law.

Peach Crop Moving in Antioch District

ANTIOCH, Ark. (AP)—Harvesting of the peach crop in this vicinity is under way with the growers marketing their fruit in various ways. Some growers are hauling the fruit to Little Rock while a considerable amount is being marketed in Beebe, McRae and other nearby towns.

An average of 50 cents per bushel is being received for the peaches which are of firm, uniform quality. The Elberta is the chief variety being marketed. Large quantities are being canned.

Foster Property, Second and Elm, Sold to Robison

Department Store Owner Acquires Building 140 by 125 Feet

CONTINUES TO GROW

One of Largest Stores in Section—With Two Branches Nearby

The largest business property deal in several years was announced here Friday with the purchase of the W. Y. Foster buildings at Second and Elm streets by Geo. W. Robison, of Geo. W. Robison & Co., the department store which occupies the larger part of the property.

The corner is reputed to be the best business location in the city, and although there was no announcement of price, it is reported the largest in recent years.

The property measures 140 feet on Second street, by 125 deep on Elm. The Geo. W. Robison & Co. and L. C. Burr & Co. buildings cover all the ground area except a 25-foot strip to the rear, which was included in the purchase.

Mr. Robison's store fronts 90 feet on Second street. The L. C. Burr company holds a lease on the next 50-foot front at the corner.

Robison & Co. acquired the largest ground floor space in the city and one of the largest in this section of the state when the A. L. Johnson store site was taken over January 1, 1929. Mr. Robison tore out the intervening wall and threw the 90-foot front into one big store.

Mr. Robison has been in business at the present location for seven and a half years. He is one of the largest and most aggressive merchants in the southwestern counties, a director in the Citizens National Bank, and owner of two other stores in this section.

On July 1, 1929, he opened his Nashville store in its own building, one of the largest mercantile firms of that city. February 1, 1930, he leased two buildings at Prescott, threw them into one store, and opened in business there—giving him three of the largest mercantile units in this area.

History of Chili Told By Moreland

Hope Manufacturer Produced 10,186 Cans Last Year, Rotary Hears

The story of his development of a canned chili business which has spread out from his Hope drugstore plant within three years until it is now sold in 84 stores in 30 Arkansas cities and towns, was told at the Hope Rotary club luncheon Friday in Hotel Barlow by A. C. Moreland.

Mr. Moreland said that he manufactured 10,186 cans of chili last year, which was a new record for his young and growing business. He has advertised his Hope product heavily.

"When I went into the chili business," he said, "I had to choose between one of two courses—either move to a larger city and put in a string of chili stands serving the product fresh, or put it up in conventional cans and retail it through grocery stores."

"I chose the latter course. Moreland's Hope chili is now on sale in 84 stores in 30 Arkansas towns and cities. It is advertised by road signs on half the highways of the state, and on all the roads out of such cities as Little Rock, Pine Bluff and Fort Smith."

Mr. Moreland told how he came from Lake Charles, La., some years ago to establish himself as a citizen of Hope. It was in Lake Charles that he became a druggist, and it was there that he first began the experiments which resulted in his present brand of chili.

He explained one of the distinguishing features of Hope canned chili. It has no gristle. Mr. Moreland said the gristle's strength is passed on to the chili by cooking it with the other ingredients, but the gristle is confined in a cheese-cloth bag, and discarded after boiling in the pressure-cooker.

Friday's program was presented by Jim Henry, of the program committee. Lee Diehl, manager of the Hope Building Material company was a guest of the club.

H. O. Kyler, manager of the Union Compress & Warehouse Co., attended as a new Rotarian.

Peach Harvest 825 Carloads Thursday

Arkansas Elbertas Reported to Be Topping Market in Mid-West

NASHVILLE. (AP)—Up to Thursday morning there had been 825 car loads of peaches shipped from the Highland District, the larger part of which have been from the Nashville station, the shipping not being under way heavily at the Highland station up to yesterday. 652 of the cars had been shipped from Nashville and only 173 from the Highland station. These figures do not include other points in the district, where several cars have been shipped but the figures are not available.

Despite the fact that there is a bad condition existing in the local market which it is hoped will be overcome, the Arkansas Elbertas are topping the market throughout the mid-west, the government report received yesterday morning stating that Arkansas Elbertas are in control of the market and bringing from $1.75 to $2.00, while the Georgia and other peaches are bringing only $1.00 to $1.50.

As the season advances the quality of the fruit has improved, and unsent from the district are now going on the markets of the country. Extra fancy packs are available in quantities never before known. The size of the fruit in some of the orchards is the largest ever seen here, and the color could not be better under any condition. The fruit is firm and entirely free of disease or insect damage.

In contrast to prior harvests, there is this year keen competition in selling the crop and no competition whatever in the buying.

If Hope wins the state title at Fort Smith next week, the local boys will go to Little Rock August 14-15 for the four-states district competition, between Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Texas. The winner of that event enters the divisional championship at Colorado Springs later in the month, followed by the national championship games at Houston.

Sponsored by the local post of the American Legion, the Hope team has been put to about $100 expense for uniforms, and for taking the 15 players to Fort Smith there will be an additional expense of about $125. Most of the expense of uniforms has already been met by public subscription.

Accuse Perry of Robbing Victim

Prosecutors Use Witnesses Who Testify Woman Had Money and Jewelry

EAGLE RIVER, Wis. (AP)—Robbery was inferred by the state Thursday as a motive for the slaying of Cora Belle Hackett, the Chicago widow, whose "honeymoon" last summer with Geo. W. E. ("Jiggs") Perry, confessed polygamist, ended in her death.

Witnesses in the Circuit Court trial of Perry on a murder charge, revealed that the woman carried money at all times and wore two expensive rings, all of which were missing when her body was found last September, weeks after Perry fled.

Mrs. W. H. Parker, whose husband owned the honeymoon cottage, said that Perry and his "bride" left the cottage the morning of July 6 for a hike after Perry had borrowed a rifle from her husband. About three hours later, the witness said, Perry returned alone and said his wife was going to Minocqua where he was to meet her.

Earlier prosecution testimony dealt with evidence identifying the body found in the woods as Mrs. Hackett's.

Gasoline Drops to 11 Cts. Texarkana

Independents and Major Companies Slash Price of Texas Fuel

TEXARKANA. (AP)—A gasoline war with the major oil companies pitted against the independent operators is in progress here with indications that Texarkana motorists will operate their automobiles at the cheapest cost in years for a short time.

The war was precipitated when seven of the major companies announced a two-cent reduction on the cost of gasoline at filling stations making the price 12 cents a gallon to the consumer. This brought the price down to that charged by the independents for several weeks.

Several other independent dealers met the reduction by cutting their prices to 11 cents per gallon. Texarkana does not now participate in the Arkansas state tax on gasoline.

Taylor Marshall Killed in Battle Streets Wednesday

T. C. Cogbill, Superintendent of Cummins, Is Badly Wounded

MANY SEE SHOOTING

Victim Had Seen City Official in Most a Year

TAYLOR, Ark. (AP)—Taylor Marshall, an escaped convict, was shot and made good as a city official was killed late Thursday night in the streets of Taylor, Ark., when he was shot by Cogbill, superintendent of Cummins, who was with officers who were looking for him to the penitentiary.

T. C. Cogbill, superintendent of Cummins, who was with officers who were looking for him to the penitentiary, was wounded in the battle. He was ported at a Pine Bluff hospital today to be in very satisfactory condition.

MAGNOLIA.—Nathan Fields, 40, who escaped in 1923 from the penitentiary, where he was serving a term of 10 years, was shot and killed late Thursday at Taylor, Ark., on the L. & A. railroad. From here, after he had wounded T. C. Cogbill, superintendent of the penitentiary system, when Cogbill and other officers attempted to arrest him. Cogbill was shot through the arm and lower chest. He was taken in an ambulance to a hospital at Pine Bluff. Fields was shot through the chest, and died about 20 minutes later.

Cogbill was accompanied to Taylor by E. E. DeArmond, assistant superintendent of the state farms, and Fincher, Columbia county sheriff. The officers saw Fields walking along the railroad track, and Cogbill drew a pistol and opened fire. Fincher said. The officers returned the fire, and in the exchange of shots, Cogbill was struck in the arm and chest. Fields ran a short distance along the railroad track before he fell mortally wounded.

Had Served as Marshal

Fields had served as town marshal Taylor about a year. He had spent most of his life at Taylor, and his family was well known in that section. His father, Eli Fields, who died last winter, was a justice of the peace years.

In February, 1922, Fields, 35 years old at that time, was sentenced to the penitentiary for 10 years on a charge of second degree murder. He was accused of having killed Tom Wayne and Grady Talley during an altercation at a dance in the county. Taylor. He was tried for only one of the killings.

After serving as a trusty guard in the penitentiary in Little Rock about 18 months, Fields escaped. Shortly afterward, he returned to his home at Taylor. Warden Todhunter said records at the penitentiary show the Fields was granted a 60-day furlough by Governor Tom Terral, although three years had passed since Fields escaped from the penitentiary. When he did not return to the penitentiary at the end of 60 days he was listed as a fugitive.

Don't Know Where We're Going, but We're on Our Way!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—President Hoover, who had some nice biographies written about him before he was elected, is now suffering from a literary backwash. At least four biographies or books containing extended sketches have lately appeared, all of which tend to cast considerable aspersions at him, describing him as weak, irritable, vacillating, selfish, disagreeable and so on. Much is made of the fact that the president used to be a promoter of mines rather than a "great engineer."

The first anti-Hoover biography, called "The Great Mistake," drew no wide attention. Extremely critical evaluations of the president in "The Mirrors of 1932" and "Washington Merry-Go-Rounds"—both anonymous—are attracting more notice. A Washington newspaper has also begun a Hoover serial biography which obviously wasn't checked at the White House. Those who want to renew their faith in Hoover, however, can still rely on the biographies by William Hard, Will Irwin and Rose Wilder Lane, as well as one published early this year—"The Boy's Life of Herbert Hoover" by Mitchell V. Charney. All books mentioned are full of anecdotes.

AMBASSADOR FRED SACKETT in Berlin told the newspaper boys there that in his trans-Atlantic phone conversations with Under-Secretary of State Bill Castle he had used slang as a code to conceal his meaning from possible foreign eavesdroppers. It sounded like one of the most cock-eyed ideas ever to come out of American diplomacy.

Castle was asked to reveal some of the slang Sackett had used. He replied that he didn't recognize any of the ambassador's words as slang. In as much as Castle used to teach English at Harvard, this seems to make the yarn more cock-eyed than ever.

CONGRESSMAN SOL BLOOM, the effervescent Washington bi-centennial director, who is feverishly humanizing George Washington, also aims to popularize the famous old Liberty Bell in Philadelphia. "They don't know what they've got there," he says. "Philadelphia hasn't the heart-interest and the enthusiasm to bring that bell to the people." Thanks to Sol, there will be cards beside the bell for people to sign. They will say: "I visited the Liberty Bell and touched it on (such and such a date)." The idea is that you sign the card, take it home and gaze at it fondly forever after. That makes you more patriotic.

GOVERNOR ALBERT CABELL, Ritchie of Maryland, considered a Democratic presidential possibility almost since boyhood. Recently visited ex-Senator Joseph P. France of Port Deposit, Md., the only announced candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. "I hope the Democrats don't nominate you after my party gets through nominating me," France told him. "You're the handsomest man they've got and I'm depending too heavily on the women's vote to stand the competition."

France ought to be able to pick a winner this time (he picks himself) just by the law of averages. He supported himself in 1920, Senator Hiram Johnson in 1924 and Ritchie in 1928. His most prominent supporter this year is ex-Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon, a man of agile mind, 76 years old, who now lives here with an attractive 35-year-old wife. In 1912 Bourne first backed LaFollette for president, then Roosevelt and finally Taft. He also found time to run for re-election, but was licked.

THE Russian "embassy" here, as the Soviet Union Information Bureau under Boris E. Skvirsky on Massachusetts avenue is often called, is now guarded at the front entrance by a tiny, ornamental, painted toy building whose lens is attached to the doorknob. These "Reds" don't seem especially blood-thirsty. Neighbors tell how once when Mrs. Skvirsky's pet canary escaped, the whole staff, headed by "Ambassador" Skvirsky himself, piled down the avenue in hot-and-successful pursuit.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

Wales Finds Fresh Speed

Thrills In Motor Boats

LONDON.—(AP)—The Prince of Wales, growing older but seeking new thrills, has taken up motorboating. motorboats.

Two new boats, constructed with superspeed four cycle engines, have been constructed at Birmingham for delivery to Virginia Water, in Sussex. There, with flying and motoring friends, he expects to taste the sensations of speed on water.

The new hobby goes back to a house party about the first of July, when Captain John Falethorpe, one of the makers of Dab III, an extraordinary fast British boat, was demonstrating the craft in an artificial lake in front of Himeley Hall, Dudley, Worcester-shire.

The prince, long fond of speed in all forms, asked to take the controls. He was very apt and soon could pilot her at 40 miles an hour.

Although he laughed at warnings that a fast turn would throw him into the water unless made with perfect precision, he wore a life belt, in deference to the wishes of the experts and his royal position.

After returning to Windsor he had Captain Falethorpe send down a small hydroplane purely for racing purposes and since has cruised about the lake at Windsor Park in his bathing suit, lying flat on the bottom, manipulating controls with his feet and grasping the steering wheel with both hands. Prince George also has learned to pilot the small craft.

It was after these spins in the hydroplane that the prince decided he would like some boats of his own and ordered two copies of Dab III, which he will moor within a few yards of Smith's Lawn, where his private aerodrome is located.

"He shows extraordinary skill at the wheel," Captain Falethorpe said. "There is no doubt that he has a splendid knowledge of speed."

Monticello Woman Shows Fine Profit From Garden

MONTICELLO.—Sales of $117.83 worth of vegetables and fruits from her garden is reported by Mrs. John Gardner, roadside market demonstrator, who is working in cooperation with Miss Mabel Kitchings, home demonstration agent, in this project in home marketing. Her sales include beans, radishes, carrots, beets, squash, English peas, turnips, onions, cabbage, apples and peaches. Her home orchard and garden occupy two acres of land.

Four state champions entered the amateur trials held in Atlanta, for places in the National amateur golf championships at Chicago.

Teaching Farming Pays—The Pupils

PIERRE, S. D.—(AP)—Here's a twist to the old story about farm boys raising bigger crops than their fathers: The labor income of South Dakota farm boys in vocational agriculture projects during the last year exceeded the total of salaries paid to their agriculture teachers!

Projects conducted by 590 boys brought them a labor income of $33,549, principally from hogs and corn.

Negro ground keepers of the Chattanooga baseball club have appeared at games held in snow-white bathing suits decorated with circus sponges.

A Thought

On divorce: "Every marriage is a trial," declared Uncle Sam. "The trouble is that so few people have the nerve to fight the case."—Collier's Weekly.

The Government's Deal With Capone

Associated Press bulletin on the front page of yesterday's Star confirmed an ugly street rumor as true.

The government did make a trade with Al Capone, whereby the gangster chief pleaded guilty to income tax violations on the understanding that the federal prosecutor would recommend a modified sentence and would not probe his liquor activities.

The expose came suddenly and dramatically. Capone had pleaded guilty and the government was proceeding on a cut-throat plan when Federal Judge Wilkerson exploded his bombshell. He ordered the prosecution and the defense to prepare for evidence on prohibition as well as income tax law violations.

Attorney Michael Ahearn, for the gangster, stood up in court and protested that the federal district attorney had promised his client immunity on that score.

Judge Wilkerson elevated his eye-brows and looked across the room to George E. Johnson, federal district attorney. The district attorney arose. He told the judge there had not only been a conference with the defense counsel, but the case had been taken up with his superiors in the Department of Justice at Washington. The prosecutor picked up a portfolio of correspondence to back his statement and handed it to the judge. The judge took one look, and said he would regard it as confidential—meaning that the newspapers may only guess what was in it.

This is a shocking story to the American public. We sometimes admit the bitter necessity of a local prosecutor compromising with a plea of guilty from a criminal he might be unable to convict; and we are hardened to the picture of a community inviting troublesome petty offenders to leave town rather than try to convict them—but the United States of America coming off second best in a collision with its most notorious gangster is a spectacle that takes our breath away.

This is not a school-room criticism of the federal district attorney in Chicago. We can yap our heads off all day, and still not change the fact that no political office-holder on earth would have made such a deal with Capone except out of bitter necessity. Capone had the government beaten—and the government made the best of it.

We are walking out of that courtroom shocked and shamed by the discovery that this nation has reared up a criminal giant big enough that even the government itself cannot touch him.

America has been guilty of a lot of loose talk, and looser actions. She has tolerated prating individuals in places where statesmen were looked for—and some of her laws are a generous improvement on the Ten Commandments.

But Al Capone has proved that you can wrap yourself up in a mantle of law-books and stalk through the whole Roman army of the prosecution.

And won't that news make Rome burn!

An Encouraging Sign

THE old Arab saying—"This, too, will pass"—ought to go well, framed, on the walls of business men's offices these days. In the early part of 1930 men were predicting that prosperity would be back in another month, at the longest; now they tend to believe that the depression will never end at all.

One is reminded of all of this, somehow, by the news, buried in the financial columns recently, that the Hudson Bay Company has passed a dividend.

The Hudson Bay Company, unfortunately, is not unique in that respect. It has been a year of passed dividends, all around. The shareholder who gets dividend checks regularly can congratulate himself as being luckier than many of his brethren.

What makes this particular incident interesting is the fact that the Hudson Bay Company is one of the oldest companies on earth. It has been in continuous operation since 1670. This depression is not the first it has seen, nor is it the worst; and one is safe in guessing that it will not be the last.

One imagines that the directors of the company are not unduly alarmed by the present depression. Their company was an old, established house before the French lost Canada. It lived through the world-wide panic that followed the bursting of the notorious "Mississippi bubble" over two centuries ago. It survived the turmoil of the Napoleonic wars and their troublesome aftermath. It is older than most of the earth's existing governments.

To some of us the depression looks like a calamity that will never end—a prelude to universal downfall. But to the gentlemen of the Hudson Bay Company, probably, it is visible in its proper perspective. In the days since 1670 it has weathered a good many storms. "This, too, will pass."

We'd rather see a sermon than hear one any day. We'd rather one would walk with us than merely tell the way. The one's a better pupil and more willing than the other. Fine counsel is confusing, but example's always clear. The best of all the preachers are the men who live their creeds. For to see good put in action is what everybody needs. We can soon learn to do it, if you'll let us see it done. We can watch your hands in action, but your tongue too fast may run. The lectures you deliver, may be very wise and true, But we'd rather get our lessons by observing what you do. We may not understand the high advice you like to give, But there's no misunderstanding how you act and live.—Secolled.

Schmeling-Stribling Bout to Be Shown For First Time in South

The management of the Malco Saenger theatre has secured for this city the first showing of the world's heavyweight championship boxing contest between Max Schmeling, Germany, and W. L. Stribling, Georgia.

This is the first time that this film will be shown in the South. The Malco Theaters, Inc. have bought the film for exclusive screening privileges in the state of Arkansas.

The picture is a good fight film and gives good presentations of all the action of the fight and shows the knockdown of Stribling, for the count in slow motion pictures. The picture is also in sound which adds to its glamour and excitement.

Lindy Gets Ready for Asiatic Hop

Gray Hairs Still Love Adventure

Woman Plans Ocean Hop Just for the Thrill of Flying

BUFFALO, N. Y.—(P)—The trans-Atlantic air lines beckon, and a little, gray-haired woman prepares to answer the call.

In the garden of her Buffalo home, patterned after an Italian villa, Mrs. Geraldine Grey Loffredo is completing her plans for a non-stop flight from Buffalo to Rome, Italy, early in August.

She is completely confident of success. She has purchased a plane which has proved its worth—the Bellanca monoplane Liberty, in which Otto Hillig and Holger Hoiris flew to Germany in June. She has had the technical advice of Giuseppe Bellanca in every detail of her preparations.

She hopes her flight will help to further amicable relations between Italy and the United States. American-born and educated at Corney University, she has spent much time in Italy and is married to an Italian-American.

Quiet and retiring almost to the point of being shy, Mrs. Loffredo impresses casual acquaintances as anything but the adventurous type. Yet the perilous paths of the air are almost as familiar to her as her own garden.

Back in 1913, when airplanes still were scoffed at as impractical, she was touring the United States, Canada and Italy, doing parachute jumps from balloons.

She represented America in a jumping contest in Italy and was the first woman to make a 3,500-foot parachute jump.

The world war came, and Mrs. Loffredo served with a United States ambulance corps as a chief mechanic. Afterwards she continued her parachute jumping from airplanes.

Finally she took up flying, graduating from the Rochester flying school, and last year piloted a tri-motored plane on excursions over Niagara Falls.

Mrs. Loffredo will not make the flight alone but, in line with her avowed purpose of advancing Italian-American friendships, has obtained the services of Captain Renato Donati of Italy as co-pilot and navigator. Donati was one of Italy's aces during the war and has an enviable flying record. The two are old friends, Donati having piloted Mrs. Loffredo's plane for several of her parachute jumps in Italy.

Mrs. Loffredo experienced some difficulty in obtaining her husband's acquaintance in her adventure. He felt at first, he said, that for her these dangerous adventures should be a thing of the past—that her place was in her quiet home, strolling in the garden with her pet show dogs, enjoying the comforts of life.

But her keen interest and intense enthusiasm eventually won him over. He sums up her chances thus:

"She will succeed, she has worked hard and is fully prepared for the undertaking; she has a tenacious character and what she really wants, she goes after until she gets it."

Judge (after charging jury): "Is there any questions that any one would like to ask before considering the evidence?"

Juror: "A couple of us would like to know if the defendant boiled the malt one or two hours, and how does he keep the yeast out?"

Hoover Plan Shatters Party Lines In France

By LOUIS F. LOCHNER

BERLIN.—(A)—The young German republic made no mistake when, through President Paul von Hindenburg, it summoned Wilhelm Groener, the "red general," in 1928 to the post of minister of defense.

Groener was not only a trusted commander-in-arms of Hindenburg, whose dismissal of General Erich Ludendorff in October, 1919, he also proved himself a reliable republican in whose hands the new army was safe from monarchist influences.

Unlike Ludendorff, who spoke in ever more offensive language of his former field marshal, Groener has throughout been a devoted follower of Germany's grand old man. On assuming the office of minister of defense he declared:

"Hindenburg's faith in me is the foundation upon which I rest."

This fidelity paid dividends, for Groener has been able to get from a reluctant reichstag larger appropriations for the army and navy, relatively, than any other government department could secure. The fact that Hindenburg stood behind the "red general" butted stiff criticism.

Groener served in the great war in three exacting positions—first as chief of the entire army of transportation system, then as head of the newly created "kriegsmarine," whose duty it was to carry out the economic and material organization of Hindenburg's program of correlating the activities of the whole civilian population with those of the military, and finally as quartermaster-general.

It was in the last position that he acquired the sobriquet of "red general." Unlike most of the military men surrounding Emperor William II, he saw that the days of the monarchy were numbered and dared say so in the council at Spa on November 9, 1918, which led to the kaiser's flight to Holland.

For this action his fellow officers dubbed him a "red." So relentless were they afterward in their social boycott that Groener insisted upon the appointment of an "honor court" of generals, who, after studying the Spa events, exonerated him from having committed any dishonorable act toward the sovereign to whom he had sworn allegiance.

After the emperor's departure Groener assisted Hindenburg in leading the exhausted German army back home. He then retired from service. In 1920, however, when Kapp tried to unseat the republican government, Groener rallied to Ebert's support and was a leading figure in putting down the rebellion. As minister of transportation he rendered conspicuous service from 1920 to 1923.

Groener is a good mixer who has always managed, though working hard, to attend social functions and himself be a charming host. The duties of hostess were taken over by his only daughter after the death of his first wife and until his remarriage in 1930. The affection between father and daughter was proverbial in Berlin. Groener was born November 22, 1867, in Ludwigsburg, Wuertemberg, the son of a Saxon army paymaster. He entered the army in 1884 and rose rapidly despite the opposition of many fellow officers who were of noble blood and missed the "von" in his name.

Five of the experimental microphones will be used by speakers who will be able to stroll about the platform or turn their backs on the audience for explanation of charts or motion pictures.

Caddies Pay Tribute to Bill Burke

When Bill Burke was a caddy at the Naugatuck, Conn., golf club years ago, he dreamed of becoming a golfer. A few years later, at 16, he was champion of the local course. Neary, right, club president, is presenting a silver plate bought by the caddies shown in the picture.

Prescott Defeats Locals Thursday

Hope Juniors Will Leave For Fort Smith to Play Next Week

The Hope American Legion Junior baseball team was defeated Thursday afternoon at Fair Park by a team from Prescott. The score was: Prescott, 11 Hope, 4. This game has no standing in the state championship for which the Hope team will compete next week at Fort Smith, but is only a practice game. It is planned to have a return game Friday with the same team.

Prescott out hit the locals for a total of 15 hits, two of which were home runs by Dehan and Tackett. Hope gathered in a total of 11 hits but could not bunch them for extra runs. Two pitchers were used by Hope, Turner and Stephens.

THE VALUE OF CREDIT

When a man's credit is gone, he has little left that is of any commercial value. Experience he may have, and social position, but without the standing which stamps him as a man who will meet his obligations, it is a bootless task for him to try to carry on a successful business.

A banker's confidence in the man to whom he lends money is based upon the experience, the application and the character of the man. And character plays no small part in the essential elements considered. But it is not enough simply to be honest. Many a man is honest, and nothing more. He must be able to accomplish things, for without this he cannot be considered a good risk.

There is no royal road to credit; its building is the work of years. It is one of the most precious things in a man's life-time career, and should be guarded zealously, and above all, it should not be dishonestly taken advantage of when once established. In every deal, credit plays its part with cash. If it were not so, there would be little chance of a man with limited means rising above his present station in life, and only those who were fortunate in already having money could do business to advantage. The security of the largest business houses in the land today was founded upon credit—their ability to make good—quite as much as upon the amount of their worldly possessions.—Business Service.

Two Burglars Escape From Clark Officers

ARKADELPHIA — Sheriff Alfred Duke and Deputy Sheriff H. L. Batchelor surprised two burglars trying to enter the Clark county clerk's office in the courthouse here, but after a foot race had to give up the chase.

The sheriff was about to overtake his man and when he failed to heed a command to halt fired two shots at him. Just as he shot, a negro close to the line of fire halted and threw up his hands. The officer stopped to investigate the negro, while the culprit got away.

The negro was not wanted, but was doing the safe thing. It developed, Deputy Sheriff Batchelor's man also got away in the dark. Both burglars

Owen Young's Pet Project Is Small Village School

Home Folk Know Great Financier as Neighbor Without "Airs," and Familiarly Call Him By His First Name When He Comes to Town

By REID MONFORT

VAN HORNESVILLE, N. Y.—(AP)—Over this little farming village of about 180 persons hovers the personality of a figure far-famed in finance—Owen D. Young.

But it is as a generous friend and kindly neighbor rather than as an international personage that residents of his home town view him.

Many of them have known him all their life. He is "Owen" to nearly everyone, and their first names come easily to his tongue.

It is here that the financier has centered shining hopes in a model school he has built, from which the youths of the community may fare forth into the world "without an inferiority complex."

Here are his chicken and dairy farms, his milk plant, grist mill and fish hatchery—places where most of the villagers find employment.

Here, too, is his modest white home, not unlike others of the community, where his mother lived—a home bright with flowers and green with shrubbery.

The chief hobby of the one-time agent general of world war reparations is the school that he built, rising in colonial beauty near the site of the tiny grammar school to which he went as a boy.

After leaving that little school, he began what he terms his "cheese box school days."

That was when he went to a high school not far away, provisioned with a week's food supply that his mother had cooked and stored in a cheese box. Each week he returned to his farm home to get a "refill."

At 15 he was ready for college, and on borrowed money he went through St. Lawrence University.

This present-day giant of finance says it took "10 or 15 years" for him to get over an inferiority complex, engendered by his early school days. Sometimes, he says, he "still feels that complex."

Largely from this materialized his model school—a place to give a child confidence to cope with the world.

Built to accommodate 45 or 50 children the school was opened in 1929. The enrollment shot to 168, and work is now under way to give space for 400.

He supplements the minimum school taxes with whatever money is needed.

To the school, more than 12 miles from the nearest railroad, has come modernity. Children from all parts of Herkimer county find here the latest in equipment—radios, talking pictures, and a library with the classics, leading magazines and daily newspapers.

In keeping with Mr. Young's plan, there is wide choice of studies, all calculated to give a practical education.

On the well-equipped play grounds are two swimming pools, one for the tots, and the other for older children. As a boy, Mr. Young never realized, one of his most cherished ambitions—learning to swim.

This tall man with the alert brown eyes often visits the school and asks Maurice S. Hammond, the boyish-looking, earnest-eyed principal: "Got a minute? Let's go down to the boiler room and talk things over."

And to the boiler room they go, where Mr. Young hauls forth an old pipe, lights it, and snorts about the children and the school.

He likes to sit at the side of a swimming pool with a group of pupils about him and watch others play in the water.

He asks the youngsters many questions about their homefolks, how far away they live, how old they are, and other such things.

In his home town this 56-year-old man whose brown hair shows little silver is regarded as a person with lots of faith in humanity. In his face they see character. His "lack of grand airs" draws comment.

As a "family man" he shines in his neighbors' eyes. He is great "for staying at home" and would like to have his wife and four children with him all the time, his friends say.
